Cookies

What are Cookies?

Cookies are small text files which are stored by the browser on your computer. Only the information that you provide, or the choices you make while visiting a website, can be stored in a cookie. Allowing a website to create a cookie does not give that or any other site access to the rest of your computer, and only the site that created the cookie can read it.

Our use of Cookies and how to opt out:

We use cookies to monitor how people use our site, provide the services and features offered on our website, and to improve our user experience. Some of the cookies described above are stored on your machine by third parties when you use our website. We have no control over these cookies or how the third parties use them. If you prefer not to use cookies, you can choose to delete or disable cookies within your browser settings at any time. For more information about these controls, visit your browser or device's help material. All modern browsers provide a setting that allows a user to block third-party cookies. Please note that if you delete or disable our cookies, this may impact functionality in certain areas of the website.

Purpose of cookies for our website

Session cookies –Are used to remember which pages you visited, or for when you use the 'Back' button. Once you close your browser or log out, the cookie will expire and be deleted.

Persistent cookies – May be used to store information or settings about you to improve your experience on our website. For example, "Remember me" cookies which store your username and password when you visit a site. This is not used to identify you: only to make logging into a website faster and more convenient.

Third Party cookies – These are cookies placed by another website or service i.e. it has a different address to the one you see in your browser's address bar: in other words a third-party. They are used to allow that third party to provide a service to us. Examples include cookies created by Google's services (Google Analytics), cookies stored when you share content on social sites (such as Facebook/Twitter) and those created by advertisements served from a different website (which is very common).

Third party cookies possibly used by this website, depending on content or services provided on individual pages, are listed below together with a link to the providers cookie policy.
